SPEECH OF GOV. ORR.

BURIAL OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

At 6 o'clock yesterday evening the members of he Board and their invited guests entered the pacious and clogant banquet hall of the Charles ton Hotel, to the inspiriting music of the U.S. 6th Infantry Band, which was stationed under the varandah in the quadrangle. The hall had been becutifully and tastefully dec rated, under the supervision of A. W. WARDELL, r., Esq. At the head of the table the Stars and Stripes were unfurled, enshrouding within their folds the Palmetto Flag. Over the centre was the following legend: "When commerce flourishes. orosperity reigns." The room was further decorated with the British, Russian, French and Spanish flags. The tous ensemble of the Hall was of dazling splendor. Never before have we seen table so finely ornamented, and all in perfect taste. In front of the President was anchored a large vessel, the George Peabody, under full head of steam; on the table to the left was the Temple of Liberty, an elegant structure, in the construction of which not a little architectural skill was exhibited. Opposite to it was a locomotive and freight train crossing the Edisto Bridge. Further down on the eastern table was a pyramid of staple productions of South Carolina cotton and rice, and opposite to it a splendid Palmetto tree, with fac similes of Sea Island cotton piled around. These ornaments were all manufactured by Mr John Marion, King stre In addition to these ornaments a neat bouquet was placed by each plate. There were in all about 200

My friends, let us for a time throw saide all the cares and trials or life, and live but for the hour.

For two long years it has been my sim to conduct the affairs of the State in a manner that should develope "its resources, and yet be, in accordance with the course indicated by the Excentive of the United States. In a measure, however, my efforts have been unavailing, and within the lest thirty days a still greater change has been necessitated. After we had done all that was required of South Carolina, Congress comes roward and declares that that body, and not the President, has the right to dictate the terms upon which the reconstruction of the State is to be effected. Carrying out that view, Congress passed a bill at its regular seasion known as the Shorman Bill, and, during its ree, in seasion, what is known as the Supplemental Bill; and the visial question now dor to shoulder with the white man, and carrying out the principles which I doubte to urge upon you on this occasion.

It is to be expected that attempts will be made to altenate the sympathics of these people from us. People will come her-and see that the negroes have been exceeded. We concede the fact that theirs was a condition-controlled with the the controlled which the back man earns by his labor goes to his pocket in precisely the aume way as every doubar which the black man earns by his labor goes to his pocket in precisely the same way as every doubar which the white man earns goes into has pooket. Now, therefore, our interest is identical.

As some of these remarks are likely to go in print, I would here take occasion to say one or two things which I desire to go upon the record. When an emissary comes here from the state of New York, Massachusecks or Ohio, and eays to the black man, we are your friends,—we are going to take care of you; vote with us; these white people cannot be trusted; I want our collected men to eay to these emissaries, to the Massachuset man,—that in South Carolina, under this law, it matters not by whom it was passed, every colored man, twenty-one years of age, is enacticed to the balled, and that he would not be allowed to vote in Massachusett and that he would not be allowed to vote in Massachusett and the beathen there, beather there, beather there, beather there has hear of the purpose of giving advice on the way of sala vote, go back to Ohio, and en lighten the last that the is the black man shall not vote under any circumsances mattered.

Therefore I say to those collected men, when these emissary the man shall not vote under any circumsances mattered.

there are some here to take the mote from the eyes, of our own people.

I have seen indications in various localities in South Carolina to organice a colored and white party, to be called a National Union Republican Radical Party. I think that is the name. I do not think this is wise; the same of the people of these unreconstructed Stares will further teler paid more thoroughly by tarning their standings to their own State politics; and when we get the right of the own State politics; and when we get the right of the own State politics; and when we get the right of the own State politics; and when we get the right of the own thoroughly by tarning their standings to their own State politics; and when we get the right of the own to the own of the common three party, out I would send men who would say to all parties: We stand by that party which will give us cause in the laws and constitution of this country in the contract of the country o

Trade:

I thank you most cordially for the kind expressions to which utterance has just been given. I thank you for the grateful courtesy which accords me the privilege of participating in your festivities, and which affords me an opportunity of indicating how profoundly I sympathize in all the generous emotions which this comm-morative gathering is now eliciting.

But my sense of indebtedness is deepest, gentlemen, for the right welcome and pleasant office which it enables me to discharge, of tendering to you the kindly greetings of that venerable association whose representaive I have the privilege of being.

She concratulates her yourges sixtures as tion whose representative I have the privilege of being.

She congratulates her younger sister upon the dazzling entree she has made upon the public arona—so fitly appointed—so captivatingly arrayed—with the dew of the morning yet gleaning upon her brow—bounding with youth and freshness—exhuberant with hope and joy.

As she gazes upon her rapidly expanding charms with womanly pride, she shares in her prospective triumphs, and, with the affection of an elder sister, the bids her welc: me and all hail! I have said, she greets her as an 'idder sister—I was upon the point, Mr. President, of saying as a mother, and with mutarnal affection; but the good lady, whose champion I am, is a true daughter of mother Eve, and there is a great dal of the 'Old Adam' in her. I am sure she will smile upon me for sacrificing rhetoric to the sexual characteristic.

She is proud air, to take her young and attractive sister upon her arm, and chaperone her into society.

She is not the first nor will she be the last mother, who has passed her charming daughter off, as her sister.

Besides, our elder sister is still fondly conscious of her own charms, she feels, sir, that she has

Her infinite variety."

Mrs. Madison once said that she nover forgave any young woman for not trying to make herself as pretty as she could. The venerable lady might have left out the young.

Now our elder sister has a great reveremee for all such authoritative commed, and it is marvellous, sir, how attractive she can make herself when she dresses up—puts on her "water-fail," and her "water-wheel," and her "mame"—verily, sir, she is a "parlous" girl!

And let me tell you, Mr. President, your more demure and stately sister has not been unobservant of the advoit flirtations of the charming young coquette, whose debut we are now commemorating. I don't know sir, what it is, unless it be your winning ways, Mir. President, but it is wonderful how the men have taken to her!

I might let you into some family secrets—don't betray my confidence, and I will take the risk. Ahl if you could only have got the peep I had, and have seen the little viron shaking out her curls, hor merry face radiant with successful intricue, eyes spackling with delight, "laughter holding both her sides," (slapping her fairy hands, in vorgestacy, as she recount: d how her arch mancenvering and capitivating flances had successfully both her sides," (slapping her fairy hands, in vorgestacy, as she recount: d how her arch mancenvering and capitivating flances had successfully both lers sides," it is an aunctus tongue under their heads, and would marry both sates if they could in order to seeme a double jointure!

Well, sir, I am commissioned by her, whom I represent, to tell you lo-night, that no one rejoices more heartily than she does in all your conquests. In the sacred seclusion of her bouldoir, her heart dilating with woman's sympathy and family pride, she imprints a sisterly kiss upon the newly announced belle, and in her tenderest accents— whis pers, "Well done," "go on sister—go on!"

We are seven the reinstatement of the old home-of the family—the r
